Sheryl Crow and Criss Angel Launch Clothing Lines; Fashion Groans

You know you want their style. JK!Photo: Getty Images

Hey, celebrities! We're talking to you Fergie, Hilary Duff, Avril Lavigne, and the rest of young Hollywood. Listen up: The whole celebrity-turned-designer thing has got to stop. We know you're not listening. In fact, it's quite clear that y'all really don't care what fashion people think. You just keep announcing new deals. This week alone brought news of two more to add to the list: Criss Angel and Sheryl Crow.

Angel's new line is called MF13 (sounds like a movie rating, doesn't it?). He partnered with Dussault Apparel to create the line of clothing and accessories to be sold at the Criss Angel Mindfreak store at the Luxor Hotel in Las Vegas. Judging from his style, we're expecting lots of leather, skulls on printed tees, pewter rings, and awful patterned fedoras. As for Crow, her line of jeans, vests, and T-shirts called the Bootheel Trading Co. debuted in Dillard's stores this week. What to expect: denim, denim, and more denim. Sheryl loves denim.

We're really trying to maintain our composure over here and congratulate already successful magicians and musicians on expanding their niches. But it's just so hard. What's next, Bret Michaels doing a bandanna line? (Oh, please say no.)

Holy smoke! Do they really believe people want to look like them? Puhleez don't tell me they have perfumes coming out next. Or sunglasses. Or a jewelry line. Or car upholstery. Or....

gah I'm really starting to hate celebrity turned fashion designers craze that's sweeping Hollywood. though i have to say, i am excited about the impending fashion line from Rhianna. she has impeccable style. and is one of my favorite fashion icons

I'm sick, sick, sick of celebs trying to pass off as designers when everyone knows they do not do any of the work. They are getting paid for their name and companies are doing all the designing. It's got to stop. Not for nothing, but as to Rhianna doing a clothing line...please don't forget that her "impeccable style" is thanks to the stylists that work long and hard to create her look and the look of other celebs. I'm not looking forward to it. They all just have to do what they do....sing or act and leave the real fashion to the real designers.

As for Brett Michaels.....OMG.....please don't give him any more ideas. Nausiating!!!!

criss angel from magic to fashion...HUGE departure...who is his publicist? He also managed a plug on SYTYCD finale, wade robson (the genius) choreographed a freakishly entertaining piece performed by the cirque de soleil that I am assuming is part of the new Luxor Hotel Show "Believe" of Criss Angels (wow way too many cross promotions)
